

Poultry breeding farms have great proliferation of Musca domestica, which transmit pathogens. We present results relating to neem oil use in larvae, producing morphological and ultrastructural changes on midgut of Musca domestica.